day since they surrendered their armies to General Grant and his subordinate officers that they would not have been willing to accede to any terms of accommodation that are not degrading. A death from the blundering manner in which a physician's recipe was written took place at Washington on Sunday night last. A little girl, thirteen years of age, had some ailment Jan 1 d2m which called for the services of a doctor, who wrote out a prescription, the chief ingredient of which should have been one drachm elixir of opium, not an officinal preparation, but known as McMunn's preparation of opium, and recognized by the medical profession furnish Balls, Parties, Weddings, &c., at short notice. for its soothing qualities. The doctor, notice. in writing the prescription, abbreviated the word elixir, as he claims, "exl," but the apothecary read it "ext," and China Street, ...... VICKSBURG, MISS so compounded it. The dose prescribed, one table-spoonful, was administered to the child, who took at least seven grains of opium, whereas the intention was less than half a grain .-Despite all that could be done for her the child died in a few hours after the drug was administered. A coroner's jury examined the case, and several experienced apothecaries testified that they would have filled the prescription just as it had been done, and that the medical formula admits of no other tract "extr." The jury failed to agree and examine their yarns. -eleven being in favor of attaching blame to both doctor and apothecary and one for placing the fault on the doctor alone.
